Portfolio Manager Commentary

Performance Overview

Infocom Corporation (internet business) rose as the open tender offer has begun. In addition, santec Holdings Corporation (optical-related components) rose driven by strong performance trends and expectations of growth potential. Macbee Planet Inc (analytics consulting) fell, due to the unexpected recording of an allowance for bad debts in the latest financial statement and the company's guidance for the new fiscal year falling short of market expectations.

Market Outlook and Investment Strategy

We believe that while Japanese companies may benefit from the weakening yen, it is important to be cautious of the negative impact of rising costs due to inflation and the persistently high US interest rates. Under the circumstance, companies with individual growth elements and strong growth potential are expected to draw investors' attention. In Japan, there is a demand for investment in industries such as semiconductors, energy, and defense, as part of the domestic industrial rebuilding effort. This is in addition to the positive trends of labor shortage, wage increases, and digitalization investments. Furthermore, the growth in international affairs, and the management changes in listed companies due to the TSE's market reform are expected to make positive contributions as well. Our strategy is to invest in companies that demonstrate growth potential, have the prospect of expanding their performance, and show undervalued attributes in stock price indicators.
